Re city food supply in an emergency.

What's going to happen if there's a storm or something like this one and the shelves in the food stores start emptying out like they did at Shaws Central Sq. and people can't get food so they start breaking into peoples' houses or apartments to steal food?

Why? due to overpopulation from new development.

All new development has to be halted, specifically buildings that have not yet received certification yet, until an in depth study of this immediate matter has been done and a full public report is made to the citizenry in the council chamber.

Now specifically the proposed bio-lab right next to Shaws Market.
Anyone with an eighth of a brain knows it shouldn't be done.

Ohhh they say nothing will happen because their so neat and perfect.
Question why are they so desperate in putting that bio-lab right there?
There has to be more to this than meets the eye.

The fact is human beings aren't perfect. They're fleshy and filled with all kinds of nutty desires and mood changes that affect the state of their ability to be alert. Also human machinery is quite capable of falling.

One law I've learned in life after 71 years, if you set up a situation where potential trouble can happen, the forces of Trouble will try to Make it happen.

Please take the population food crisis matter seriously and investigate.
