It's time to make a plan. The haphazard building that's going on in the Alewife area is infuriating. At some point all this random development is making the City less inviting and on a purely economic level can conceivably contribute to Cambridge losing its luster as a tempting place to live or work.

It's surprising to see that there's a "status quo" order from Councilors Maher, Benzan and McGovern. It's not a good sign when representatives want a process to stay the way it is without airing alternatives, and with ample evidence that many of the folks who elected the councilors are very concerned.

Stop, make a plan, let the voters have at it.
